Award Season

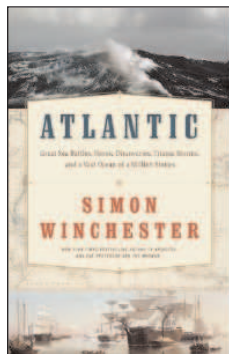

Last night the Writer's Trust Prizes were awarded. Emma Donogue and James Fitzgerald, authors of Room and What Disturbs Our Blood won in their respective categories.

We have plenty of stock of Room however we are low on stock of Mr. Fitzgerald's book. Stock will arrive shortly.

The Giller will be announced next Tuesday, who do you like? We'll give you a prize if you guess correctly. We don't know what the prize is yet though...yes cash is always good, but that's why we buy lottery tickets...How about free books?

Pick of the Week

Atlantic: Ocean of a Million Stories Simon Winchester (cl) $31.99

Mr. Winchester has captivated & informed readers on subjects as diverse as the bizarre development of the OED, the complex history of Indonesia & the global ramifications of the eruption of Krakatoa, amongst other topics. His latest plumbs the depths of the Atlantic Ocean & measures the historical significance of this unruly & magnificent body of water. Prepare to be guided through its geological origins up to the age of explorers, coastal settlements, military campaigns & present-day ecological concerns. In his extensive research & travels, Winchester makes a compelling argument that the Atlantic became the axis of Western civilization that defined the modern world.

Look who stopped by for a visit!

Charles Foran popped by rocking his Mordecai-like hair (check out the book jacket) and an even better sense of humour considering he had just spent $55.00 to ship a copy of his book to a friend in England (it's a big BOOK and he must like this friend a lot).

Mordecai $39.95

Anchee Min and Sophie Hannah dropped by for a visit where Ms. Min explained the complexities of the Chinese alphabet (it ain't the ABCs I tell you) while Ms. Hannah explained the joys of moving from the quaint English countryside to a five storey home in the city. Perhaps she'll pick up a copy of Bill Bryson's new book.

Pearl In China Anchee Min $30.00

Room Swept White Sophie Hannah $26.00

Olympic gold medalists Tessa Virtue and Scott Moir popped in Monday morning to charm us with their adorableness. Seriously, how cute are these two?

In The Pipe for November Part II

Alan Bradley's Weed That Strings the Hangman's Bag continues the crime solving exploits of eleven-year-old Flavia de Luce begun in Sweetness at the Bottom of the Pie. One reviewer has described Helen Simonson's Major Pettigrew's Last Stand as a 'romance for wrinklies'. Whether you agree with this brief assessment or believe that love's labours are largely lost upon the young anyway, readers have been recommending this charming tale to anyone who will listen. Elizabeth Kostova's Swan Thieves puts the author's Master of Fine Arts degree to work as she explores the breakdown of a renowned painter through the eyes of his psychiatrist. Anosh Irani's Cripple & His Talismans paints a captivating surreal tale of Bombay and its underworld. Paul Theroux's Dead Hand, a mystery of murder, Tantric sex and dark obsession continues the adventures in the sub-continent. One could argue the impossibility of conjuring up a credible 'Great Canadian Novel', but if one casts the Canadian land, its people and history in its sweep of characters, you could not find a more audacious, note perfect and worthy tale than Don Gilmour's Kanata. John Mortimer's Rumpole at Christmas offers some seasonal cheer and observations from the acerbic judge. Anita Shreve's Rescue & Anita Berg's Last Time I Saw You rounds out this month's trade paper fiction offerings.

Non-fiction tradepapers begin with John Cassidy's illuminating and insightful capitalist primer, How Markets Fail, or if you are keeping score, John Kenneth Galbraith 2, Alan Greenspan, o.Linda Himmelstein's King of Vodka examines the empire of one Pyotr Smirnov. Munk Debates Vol.1 edited by Rudyard Griffiths brings together the first five debates in this series covering the most important issues of our times along with some invigorating and entertaining clash of opinions. Carol Sklenicka's biography of American short story writer Raymond Carver made the NYTs Top Ten Books of the Year in 2009.
